GAT Influenza Program To Continue

The results of the recent survey which was conducted to study the effectiveness of the GAT Influenza Vaccination Program have just been released.

Over 99% of the questionnaires were returned. This was an excellent response and indicated that all employees are interested in the findings.

The survey results do not indicate that flu shots reduced the incidence of flu or lowered the average lost time per employee who had influenza. However, the effect of flu shots on the incidence of colds and respiratory illnesses appears to be very pronounced.

Seventy-two percent of those vaccinated reported that they had fewer colds than in previous years. Of those not vaccinated, 53% indicated that they had more colds than in previous years. This means, in terms of total employment, that 324 additional employees might have had fewer colds this past winter had all employees been vaccinated.

Based on the above results, and considering the fact that influenza was not present in epidemic proportions this past winter, it has been decided to continue the program again this year. A polyvalent vaccine, which will offer possible protection against influenza and other respiratory illnesses, will be made available in late summer or early fall on a voluntary basis. When the vaccine is procured employees will be advised by general notice of its availability.

H. H. KENNY RETIRES . . .

Kennys Plan Trip West

The free time to which most persons who retire seem to anticipate with much joy just won't exist for Herbert and Christine Kenny immediately, at least for the first month of his retirement.

Mr. Kenny retires on June 30 and leaves for an extended rail, boat, and auto trip through the Canadian Rockies and the Pacific Northwest on July 6. The intervening week should provide just enough time for the Kennys to pack their suitcases!

The Kennys, Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Davis, and Mr. and Mrs. William Coppel will entrain in Columbus for the beginning of a trip by rail, boat, and car which will take them to Winnipeg, Manitoba; Jasper National Park; Vancouver, Victoria, and Nanaimo, British Columbia; Lake Louise, Banff National Park, Alberta. They plan to return to Chillicothe on July 23.

All of us who are left behind join in wishing the Kennys and their traveling companions three weeks of sunny skies so that the scenes from the vista domed trains will be clear, the water smooth, and the side trips in the auto delightful.

OUR RED RIVALS

By Harold Mansfield

PART VII

When you step into a Russian savings bank, an institution rapidly growing in popularity, you think you might be in a small U. S. post office. There is the writing counter against the wall, and across from it two or three attendants' windows. Behind the partition, some women are sorting deposit slips in a shallow wood box. You watch them do their addition on Chinese abacus counting frames, adroitly clicking the beads of the ancient devices that you have also seen used in all the stores.

The manager of the bank, a man in his mid-thirties, unharried, accommodating, invites you to the back office. You feel that you have been here before, and then remember it is an old farmhouse kitchen you are thinking of, with its square-legged board table in the center. The manager apologizes for a shortage of chairs, and himself sits on the corner of the table. A government interpreter explains the intricacies of soviet banking, the six types of institutions: agricultural, state, communal, industrial, foreign trade, and savings.

You learn there is a crude approach to the use of checks, when one industrial plant writes a note to the bank which keeps its funds, asking that a certain amount of money be transferred to a bank in another city and put in the account of a plant there from which it has purchased some material. You get the manager aside.

"In the future," you say, "Russia hopes to be producing plenty of things for everyone. When that time comes, won't you need things like personal accounts at banks and credit accounts at the stores, and checks to pay for goods and services?" It is a little involved for your Russian. You repeat the question. The official interpreter hears you and comes over. You would rather have talked privately with the banker, but you put the question to the interpreter. She gives it a little laugh of inconsequentiality and turns to another man's question. Later you try it again. Finally as the visit is breaking up you insist you'd like to know the manager's opinion. She asks him. He looks at her, then at you.

"We don't have need for these things now," he says. "When we have communism," — they always speak of communism as something in the future rather than at present — "we will need neither checks nor money."

That ends the discussion. When the wall of dogma appears, communist thought will not attempt to penetrate it. But you can see clearly the contradiction. The trend in Russia is going precisely opposite to the trend planned toward pure communism. You see it further when you visit a large state bank, a more imposing institution with a long row of cashiers clicking the beads of their abacuses, but with modern bookkeeping machines behind, and a mahogany-furnished executive office, suitably adorned with portraits. The manager asks eager questions about banking practices in America.

Business methods — even government business — have only started to make the improvements that Russian science and production have been making in recent years. The distance between the Chinese counting frame at the bank and the electronic computer in the Soviet science laboratory is typical of the glaring inconsistency between the country's forward drive and the cumbersome methods of communism that are dragging it back. Clumsy office methods and procedures, the bureaucratic ladder that must be climbed for policy decisions, delay, dogma and dictation, are heavy fetters on a people's push toward progress.

But Russia is getting wise to these faults. Trade with the outside world will open her eyes, sharpen her practices. To now, America has been reaping a competitive advantage from the backward cumbersomeness of communism itself, the high "overhead" cost of its super-government, the ponderosity of governmental control. Because of this, Americans have often wrongly assumed that Russia could never do what it says. But the streamlining is bound to come. As an example, Russian plant directors say the recent decentralization of industrial ministries has greatly speeded the process of decision.

Meanwhile America has its own trend to "big government." Even now, you reflect, there isn't too much difference between the length of the list of ministries and policy-forming institutes in Moscow and the list of agencies and committees in Washington. Different names. America is not immune to the problems of big government.

A PARABLE OF THE LOTUS EATERS

According to the Greek poet, Homer, the man Odysseus was a he-coon in any situation that called for leadership, courage, and sagacity. He was a man of tremendous physical strength but, unlike many of the muscle-bound fraternity, he was far from slow on his feet or in the head. It will be recalled that it was he who brought about the fall of Troy through the strategem of the Trojan Horse, thus winning the war for the Greeks.

But, as in any other war, the winners also lost. In this case the returning Greek fleet was dispersed by violent storms. It was scattered over the length and breadth of the entire Mediterranean, where many ships were sunk or stranded, so that only a remnant of a once powerful army managed eventually to reach its home shores.

Thousands of the voyagers were drowned or otherwise killed, and many others fell by the wayside for one reason or another. Some of them landed on the Island of the Lotus Eaters, tasted of the fruit and lapsed into a state of indolent contentment, forgetting all about home or duty. They had found (or thought they had found) total security and freedom from the responsibilities of life.

One of those to land on this island "paradise" was the doughty general, Odysseus — but he was made of sterner stuff and fell not for the local food and drug act. He took one look at the islanders and one sniff at the fruit, and ordered his crew to about-face and march back to ship and head for the open sea.

This they did and, after many other dangers and temptations, finally reached their homes to take up their lives as useful citizens and to become a credit to their communities; all because their leader had been wise enough to prevent them from becoming lotus eaters — from feeding on the fallacy that they could have total security handed to them on a silver platter, or any other kind of platter for that matter — without working for it.

Education Is A Family Affair

All of you no doubt have heard the saying, "Like father — like son". One usually likes to hear this — especially when one is a proud father of a fine son.

Let's get acquainted with the Milford Barker family. Milford is in the chemical cleaning department. He is a proud father — of a fine son, Larry Lee. But for the summer at least one might modify the phrase to "Like mother — like son". Milford's wife, Ruth, and Larry, plan to enter Ohio University. Mrs. Barker will complete requirements for the bachelor's degree in education. Larry as yet is undecided on the career he will pursue.

Larry is a 1959 graduate of Waverly High School. Mrs. Barker is second grade teacher at the Waverly East Elementary School.

This past year Larry has been employed part time as an announcer and disc jockey at Radio Station WPKO, Waverly. He will be associated, in the same capacity, at Radio Station WATH, Athens, this summer.

Company Dance

Ray Charles and his orchestra from Huntington, West Virginia, will furnish the music.

The cost of this dance will be $2 a couple. Tickets will go on sale at the Recreation Office on Monday, June 22.

Let's Go Fishing

If you are a fisherman — and who isn't? — you are aware of water safety rules. But just to refresh your memory, here are a few timely tips on what to do and what not to do.

1. Don't fish alone. In rough or fast moving waters a man overboard may become separated from his one chance of rescue — his boat.
2. Don't fish too close to a dam where a sudden surge of water may capsize your craft.
3. Don't use just any kind of a boat — make sure your boat is well-powered and seaworthy before trusting it with your life.
4. Have aboard the required life preserver equipment. Wear a life preserver at all times.
