Bill Young commended for I&E assistance

"I am aware that you worked under difficult conditions and made extraordinary efforts on behalf of this important activity. The results were a great success and I applaud your unselfish performance." Joe La Grone, manager of DOE's Oak Ridge Operations, used these words to thank William E. Young, Security Inspector, TRT (D-313), for his participation in the Composite Adversary Force inspection and evaluation (I&E) conducted at Savannah River Operations Office. La Grone's expression of thanks followed a previous citation from William M. Knauff, Director of the I&E Division in the Office of Security and Quality Assessments for Defense Programs within DOE Headquarters. In only part of his comment, Knauff expressed thanks for Young's outstanding performance, hard work under difficult conditions and unselfish contribution in creating a credible, realistic adversary to test the protection performance and capabilities of the Savannah River security forces.

Armentrout, retired GAT electrician, and his wife, Laura, spend their time traveling the country in their Coachmen camper, making a circuit from coast to coast and through Canada about once each year to visit all their friends and relatives. In fact, the Coachmen has become their permanent home. "Home is where we park it!" noted Laura in a feature story about the Armentrouts contained in the first quarter 1985 issue of "Coachmen Capers" -- the company's publication.
